

ABSTRACT

Teacher's feedback is one of the important things that students need when they learn about writing skill. The feedback helps them to improve and develop their skill in writing. This study aims to find the students' perspectives on the teacher's feedback in writing assignments. This study used a closed-ended questionnaire to get the data. The questionnaire consists of 20 items and was distributed to 85 participants, who were first grade students of a private senior high school. The research questions for this study are: (1) How do students view teacher's feedback on their writing assignments? (2) How do they use the feedback to improve their skill in English writing? The study found that the students view teacher's feedback positively. They considered that teacher's feedback is important and helpful for them to improve their writing. When they got feedback from their teacher, they would study it and learn from their mistakes and the suggested corrections to improve their writing.
