Abstract

During the pandemic, everyone including children has limitations in their activities. This is what makes some activities only possible via mobile phone with the help of an internet network, which makes most people dependent on it until now. This phenomenon makes children more vulnerable to becoming objects of cybercrime. One manifestation of this crime is sexual exploitation and abuse of children in the online realm. To overcome this issues, UNICEF together with SETARA Foundation created a movement called #JagaBareng, this movement aims to invite children with an age range 12-17 years to take care of each other and overcome the dangers of sexual exploitation and abuse of children in the online realm. Therefore, the author wants to support the #JagaBareng Movement by creating an interactive talkshow that present trusted sources from UNICEF and SETARA Foundation as well as child psychologists, so that the audience, especially children, can become more familiar with this issue and become more aware so they can take care of each other.
